Islander Beverly Boos joins Al Gore in the fight against global climate change.

It's the end of the world as we know it and Beverly Duperly Boos feels fine.

That's because the island resident is solidly devoted to the "Gospel of Gore," a view of global climate change that, despite all its doomsday predictions, offers followers a glimmer of hope.

"His most important message is that we have everything we need, and that we just have to make the decision...to create change," she said of Al Gore, who's documentary film "An Inconvenient Truth" turned Boos from a climate change newbie to a pollution reducing devotee.

Trained for three weeks at the global warming guru's side, Boos has returned from Tennessee to spread the word on Bainbridge, and then, with Seattle Mayor Greg Nickels in tow, a wider Northwest audience.

"Mr. Gore was an incredible teacher who worked selflessly and tirelessly" said Boos, who was handpicked along with 1,000 others to train with the former vice president on climate change issues.

"During the three days, he trained with each person," she said. "That really shows the dedication he has to the topic. He has such a clear heart in this."

Boos, who founded the island-based Opening of the Heart education network, was trained by Gore and members of his Climate Project
